smirk as ever a smart saying declare that no representation is better than marrepresentation. It is only a superficial observer that will indulge in such catch speeches.

We all know that, practically, no representation is the most injurious thing that can happen to the State. Labor that is as free and fluctuating as water will not come to a place in which there is any inequality, or especially where it has less control in regulating its own demands and necessities than elsewhere.

We know from the example of the Southern States that even higher wages

Southern States that even higher wages will not induce labor to come to an un-fore, that by advocating the election of such men as Mr. Beck, instead of his able and talented pred caseor, Mr. Shanklin, it has defeated an object, the importance of which no one is keener to see than himself. Of course this view of the subject | ne never been taken by him, or it it has, it has not been thought equal in importauce lu party success. We acquit the editor of any desire or design to injure his State. We only point ou: to him the ille set Voneg did, as he was informed, appeared in distance in which he is doing it, leaving the day he was required to distinct for parts unknown to adiant, and if
